REASONS FOR ALLOWANCE

1. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance: the prior art of record, including newly cited Fitch et al. fail to teach or fairly suggest a method for eliminating water block around a well comprising removing the water, injecting crude oil, and injecting precipitants causing surface precipitation of asphaltenes as specifically called for in the claims.

With respect to Young et al. (cited by applicant), the reference teaches injecting an after-flush of filtered crude oil after acidizing the formation that already contains asphaltenes. See particularly col. 10, line 58 - col. 22, line 17. However, the reference fails to teach a method comprising removing the water, injecting crude oil, and injecting precipitants causing surface precipitation of asphaltenes as specifically called for in the claimed combination.

With respect to Jones et al. (cited by applicant), the reference teaches injecting an alcohol-acid with hydrocarbons to dissolve any asphaltenes present and to inhibit any further precipitation of asphaltenes. See particularly col. 2, line 58 - col. 3, line 7. However, the reference fails to teach a method comprising removing the water, injecting crude oil, and injecting precipitants causing surface precipitation of asphaltenes as specifically called for in the claimed combination.

With respect to Fitch et al. (US 4,510,997), the reference teaches a method of injecting a hydrocarbon solvent that does not cause solids such as asphaltenes to precipitate from oil in amounts to plug formation pores. See particularly col. 4, line 57 - col. 5, line 10. However, the reference fails to teach a method comprising removing the water, injecting crude oil, and injecting precipitants causing surface precipitation of asphaltenes as specifically called for in the claimed combination.

The cited references teach methods of well stimulating including injecting acids. However, none of the references alone or in combination teaches injecting crude oil and precipitants as specifically called for in the claims.

2. Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
